Poetry.

Twelve Kisses.

There's a formal kiss of fashion,
And a burning kiss of passion:
And a father's kiss,
A mother's kiss,
And a sister's kiss to nerve.

There's a traitor's kiss for gold,
Like a serpant's clammy fold;
A first kiss,
A stolen kiss,
And the thrilling kiss of love?

A meeting kiss,
A maiden kiss,
A kiss when fond hearts sever;
But the saddest kiss
On earth is this,
A kiss to part forever.

Miscellaneous.

Nettie and Jane Hold Council on the Men.

Nettie Sylva came to Jane Burgess for nice little moral lectures and wise counsel; but then in a sly, keen fashion, she often turned round upon her before they finished their talk, and gave quite as good as she got.

"Now, what on earth am I to do with that Horace?" she says to Jane, leaning over the bureau while that particular young lady folded up and put away her shawl and gloves; Nettie, meantime, taking sidelong peeps at the looking-glass trying to examine her own profile, which she was never quite satisfied with when she saw Jane's.

"It's the fox and goose and the basket of corn. If I say no, and stay at home, ther's my own poor little nose cut off, you see,—if it's pretty to say so; if I go with anybody else,—oh my gracious! wouldn't there be a ferment and a rumpus? And if I undertake to go all that six miles with him alone, I shall either have to jump out into a snowbank and run home, or keep up such a squabble as I really haven't conscience or constitution for, or else hear all he's got to say; and I ain't ready, Jane Burgess! I've quarrelled with him till I'm tired."

"What do you quarrel with him for?"

"What else can I do? It isn't safe to stay made up with him half an hour. It's the only way a girl has to get time for herself. There's no fairness in it. A man can stand off and look and consider, till he's made up his mind; and then he can come forward, and 'be particular;' and you can't let him begin to be the least bit particular without giving him claims; and how on earth you're to be fair to yourself and decent with him, I can't make out!"

"I suppose that the girl has the same time to look and consider that the man has," said quiet Jane.

"Yes, indeed! And then what if he never begins? I tell you it's all on one side, and I believe I won't have any thing to do with it!"

And Nettie pouted, and felt the tears coming into her eyes, and saw the pins on Jane's cushion begin to glitter and grow big; and then she glanced round into the glass again, to find out how she looked when she was crying.

"I think it is ordered, if we only try to do what is right," said Jane virtuously.

"Yes; and how are you going to know? If you look at a thing all round, there are so many rights. It's right for me to work myself out, and find out what I am, and what I want, and let him see. I've no business to be all Sylva and no Nettie, till after I'm married, and then drop it, as I've got to do. And he ought to be willing; it's for his good; he ought to take time for his own sake; but men never do. They are always in a hurry."

It is funny to see how a girl who comes to have affairs to manage with one man, talks immediately of the whole sex in a generalizing way, and feels as if she had all mankind at once upon her hands; and vice versa.

Well, it is true in a sense. They do stand to each other, respectively and inclusively, as man and woman; it is always, in each new experiment, Adam and Eve again, whatever else they may happen to have been christened.

"There is one thing that is always right," and Jane. "Not to do anything, ever so little, to draw a man on, unless you are sure you are"—She paused shyly, with a bit of a blush rising.

"Smashed yourself!" said Nettie, boldly. "And how are you going to know when you are smashed? Or how are you ever likely to be till you have knocked round a little? That's the point. You can't buy a pair of shoes without trying them on. It's ridiculous!"

She began again presently.

"Mrs. Sylva says it's very 'shallow' of me not to know my own mind. That's a great word of my stepmother's. But if I were shallow, really, I don't think I should have any trouble. I tell you it's just sounding and doubting and considering that makes me act so. There are so many sides to everything; and somehow I always see the opposite one. That's the reason I quarrel; and then, again, that's the reason I make up."

If I imagined I ever might marry a person," said Jane thoughtfully, "I shouldn't want to have all these little fusses beforehand. I shouldn't think he would depend so much on me afterwards."

"I don't want to be depended on. I want him to be thankful every day for what he gets, as we all are; not knowing how long it's going to last. That's Christian."

"Christian for him," said Jane quietly.

"And if I sanctify him, what better can I do? That brings up the 'ordering' again. Do you believe people are cut out for each other, Jane? I don't. If they are, I should like to know who does it."

"I think the Lord does," said Jane. "At any rate, he brings people together."

"It's fixed very queer," said Nettie meditatively, with a puzzled frown knit up into her forehead. Because you can't allow for the growing. It has to be all settled before you really come to anything. As if things had been fitted on to me when I was five years old to last all my lifetime. That's no way for—anybody—to cut out. And I dont believe anybody can. How do I know what I shall be ten years from now? Or Horace Vauzandt, either? It is an awful long measuring! Now I think of it, that was the way mother used to do with my gowns when she first came. She made them down to my heels, for fear I should outgrow them. And I hated them; they were never right. I won't begin life so all of a draggle, because I shall be up higher by and by; neither do I want to be left anywhere unprovided for or out in the cold, when I do get bigger. It isn't fair! We ought to be made so to keep pretty longer, and have some chances!" And Nettie ended as usual with a look in the glass.

Anecdotes of Stephen Girard.

The editor of the Pastor and People delivered a lecture to the officers and students of Tuft's college on the 8th of January. The following are some of the anecdotes which he related:

Stephen Girard was the sole judge of his beneficence. If rightly approached, he would give largely; but if dictated to, or treated rudely, he would not give at all. Samuel Coates, one of his old friends, knew how to manage Girard, while many who sought aid from him were unsuccessful. Mr. Coates was one of the managers of the Pennsylvania hospital, which was then much in want of funds. He undertook to get a donation from Mr. Girard, and meeting him on the street, stated his object. Mr. Girard asked him to come to him the next morning.

Mr. C. called and found Girard at breakfast. He asked him to take some, which Mr. C. did. After breakfast Mr. C. said, "Well, Stephen, we will proceed to business." "Well, what have you come for Samuel?" said Mr. Girard. "Just what the pleases, Stephen," replied Mr. Coates. Girard drew a check for $2000, which Mr. Coates put in his pocket without looking at it. "What! you not look at the check I gave you!" said Mr. Girard. "No; beggars must not be choosers, Stephen," said Mr. C. "Hand me back again the check I gave you," demanded Girard. "No, no Stephen—a bird in the hand is worth two in the bush," said Mr. Coates. "By George!" said Girard, "you have caught me on the right footing." He then drew a check for $5000, and presented it to Mr. C., observing, "will you now look at it?" "Well, to please thee, Stephen, I will," said Mr. C. "Now give me back the first check," demanded Mr. Girard—which was accordingly done.

The Rev. Dr. Stoughton, an eminent Baptist minister of Philadelphia, did not understand Mr. Girard as well as Mr. Coates did. When they were about building their meeting house in Sansom street, Dr. S. called on Mr. G. for aid. Girard received him, as he usually did beggars, coolly, but courteously, and gave him a check for $500. Dr. S. received it with a low bow; but, upon examining it, expressed his astonishment, adding, "only $500! Surely; you will not give us less than $1000!" "Let me see the check; Mr. S." said Girard; "perhaps I have made one mistake." The doctor returned him the check. With the utmost sang froid, Girard tore it into fragments, observing, "Well, Mr. S., if you will not have what I give, I will give nothing." The doctor left him exceedingly mortified.

Girard had no preference for one sect more than for another, and he gave to build churches merely to improve the city.

An old Quaker has related to me the following: "A man who had just set up in the hardware business, and who had been a clerk where Girard had traded, applied to him for a share of his patronage. Girard bought of him, and when he brought in his bill, found fault and marked down the prices. 'Casks of nails,' said he, 'which I was offered so and so, you have charged so, and so; you must take it off.' 'I can't do it,' said the young merchant. 'You must do it,' said Girard. 'I cannot and will not,' said the merchant. Girard bolted out of the door, apparently in a rage, but soon after sent a check for the whole bill. The young man began to relent and said to himself, perhaps he was offered them at that price. But it is all over now; I am sorry I did not reduce the bill and get it out of him on something else. His trade would have been worth a good deal to me. By and by, Girard came again and gave him another job. The young man was very courteous, and said, "I was almost sorry I did not reduce your former bill." "Reduce a bill!" said Girard, "had you done it I never would have traded with you again. I meant to see if you had cheated me."

The Methodists wished to build a church in Tenth street, just north of Chestnut. Thos. Haskins, a merchant, and a neighbor of Girard, called on him, and urged his suit for aid in very modest terms. Girard replied, "I approve of your object," and presented him a check for $500. The Methodist society failed, and the house was bought by the Episcopalians who wished to alter it into the splendid Gothic house now called St. Stephen's church. A committee waited upon Mr. Girard, told him their plan, and asked his aid. He gave them a check for $500. They were disappointed, and said, "Why, you gave the Methodists $500, for their little church, and we are going to build a more splendid edifice, and surely you will give us something comporting with the grandeur of our design. Have you not omitted a cipher?" They returned the check, asking him to make it $5,000. Girard tore it in pieces, and added, "I will not give you one cent. Your society is rich—the Methodists are poor. You remind me of the rich man in the gospel. He would pull down and build greater. Profit by his fate, gentlemen. I have nothing to give for your splendid church."

Everybody knows that the Old State-House Bell in Philadelphia is cracked upon one side. A Mr. Garrett of San Francisco, being a patriotic man, has sent a proposition for mending this venera bl relic of the Revolution. He offers to to take it to San Francisco, to crack the other side, then to subject the fractured parts to intense heat, sufficient to melt the edges and fuse the metal; then he will run in a certain amount of new metal, and the old bell will be as good as ever. To which the Philadelphians, not without a certain degree of indignation, respond that they do not want the bell mended, do not want a patched bell, do not wish the bell recast. "True," they say, "it cannot be rung, but nobody wants to ring it." They intimate that, if it should go to California, it might never come back again; and so Mr. Garrett is dismissed with something very like a snub.

England has never been able to settle the question whether a man may marry the sister of his deceased wife. The good people of this country have never troubled themselves with the question, and a man may marry all his dead wife's sisters without affecting his good standing in church or State.

A young man whose rich bachelor uncle warned him against marrying, saying, "Woman's delusion," replied that he never knew a man that wasn't wedded to some delusion or other, or that wasn't fond of hugging delusions. The uncle was silent, and made his will in favor of the nephew.

Marrying Upward.

No week passes that does not bring to our writing table letters stating cases and asking advice on subjects matrimonial. Sometimes a young lady thinks she does not love her suitor as much as she should to live with him for life. Young men do not get on with their girls, and wish to know what to do about it. This week one writes from a State that shall be nameless, and confesses that he has won the affections of a true and earnest young woman, but finds the ardor of his pursuit cooling now that he is sure of wining. This column is too conscientiously devoted to the permanent interests of homes to afford room for sentimental woes. We have but a few inches to give to domestic ship-building, advising how to lay the keel and how to fit the ribs. Our mission is to show how to navigate the family bark when she is afloat, to keep her sails trim, her masts polished, her rudder firm, and her locker full. But every marine can the better manage his craft for having visited the ship-yard and studied the principles on which a successful vessel is put together.

Even in Paridise the first disquietude that was felt and pronounced an evil was solitude. Then followed the deep trance, the opposite side, the rib with cordial spirits warm, moulded by Almighty art into a creature

"——so lovely fair,
That what seemed fair in all the world seemed now
Mean, or in her summed up,"

From that bright morning hour of the world

"——since high in Paradise
O'er the four rivers the first roses blew," the ralation of woman to man and man to woman has been invested with an interest universal, absorbing and perpetual.

The all-important thing in marriage is that soul be wedded to soul. This rich consumation is found only where both love a common good, where they honor virtue as much as they love life, where both feel that existance is a weary and wasting burden unless made noble by aspiration, and redeemed from the dishonors of the workshop by perpetual striving after excelence.

Let no girl fancy that in order to be thus mated her lover must be a poet, or an artist, or a man of leisure. Better to marry a worker, who carries his ideality in his carpenter's bench, than a man in the position of a gentleman but with the taste of a horse-jocky. Riding in the suburbs of a prosperous town the other day, we passed an elegant palace laid with hammered stone; there was deep chiseling on lintel and coping and friezs; the sandstone had been wrought with loving art. The man who built it began life as a stone-mason, working for so many shillings a day; but he was an aspiring stone-mason, and has chiseled his way from the quarry and the pick to the high places of honor and affluence. No young lady, not the fairest and gentlest in the land should be above marrying a house-carpenter. That was the trade of one who was "the chief among ten thousand and altogether lovely." But she has a right to say that her joiner shall be a prince in his line, that he shall wield the chisel and push the plane with a royal energy and mystery, that he shall look up to the grand Master-Builders of the world, and know something of an Angelo, who hung his mighty dome in mid-heaven, and of Giotto, who set his headstones of beauty so "high above the towers of watch and war," in Florence. Every spirited girl prefers to begin life with her husband at the foot of the hill, and climb with him to the high places of dignity and success, rather than sit down in the soft places of life with one who never knew anything else.

Where two agree to move along life's highway under the yoke of marriage, taking the hills and sandy places alike with unflinching step, but ever pressing forward, it matters very little whether a plow grinds behind them or a gilded chariott spins at their heels. United in the love of virture, watchnig as the dearest thing in all the world the development of intelligence, worth, and loveliness in each other, for them the end of life is rainbowed and its sunset is golden. Doubtless for such there awaits eternal reunion, for while in heaven there are no married bodies, so also are there no unmarried souls.

Doing a Peddling Female.

We had a visit from a book-peddling female last week. She was alone in this world and had no one to whom she could turn for sympathy or assistance, hence we should buy her book. She was unmarried and had no manly heart in which she could pour her sufferings, therefore we ought to invest in her book. She had received a liberal education and could talk French like a native; we could not in consequence refuse to pay

POPULAR EDUCATION No. 1.

The general education of the people has been held by the most prominent statesmen, of all ages, as a principle of the first importance. Two leading arguments are advanced in defense of this attainment: First, the additional security it will afford in sustaining the National Government; and, second, the increased amount of comfort and higher moral elevation it will bring to the people themselves. ARISTOTLE, who lived three hundred years before the Christian era, is credited with the assertion that "the better and more perfect the system of education, the better and more perfect the plan of government it is intended to produce and uphold." PLUTRACH endorsed LYCURGUS in his declaration that "he resolved the whole business of legislation into the bringing up of youth, which he looked upon as the loftiest and most glorious work of a lawgiver." CICERO was not less inpressed with the importance of educational attainments when he exclaimed "What, under Heaven can there be more worthy of our most streneous attention than knowledge? What more worthy of our highest admiration?" MILTON thought that to "make the people fittest to chose, and the chosen fittest to govern, will be to mend our corrupt and faulty education;" and ADAM SMITH believed that "the education of the common people requires, perhaps, in a civilized and commercial society, the attention of the public more than that of people of some rank and fortune;" and JOHN STUART MILL maintains that "education is one of those things which it is admissible in principle that a government should provide for the people." MACAULEY understood the true principle of popular education when he said, "The education of the people, conducted on those principles of morality which are common to all the forms of Christianity, is highly valuable as a means of promoting the main end for which government exists, and is, on this ground, an object well deserving the attention of rulers." Lord BROUGHAM was a zealous advocate of popular education and the diffusion of useful knowledge. "Let," said he, "the soldier be abroad if he will; he can do nothing in this age. There is another personage abroad—a person less imposing; in the eyes of some, insignificant. The schoolmaseer is abroad, and I trust to him, armed with his primer, against the soldier in full uniform array."

Similar sentiments have long been entertained by the best thinkers of France. MONTESQUIEU, who lived down in the eighteenth century, realized the importance of popular education, but failed to secure its blessings to his own country. "Education," he said, "makes the man; that alone is the parent of every virtue; it is the most sacred, the most useful, and, at the same time, the most neglected thing in every community." Nor was M. GUIZOT less alive to the paramount importance of this principle when he declared that "universal education is henceforth one of the guarantees of liberty." But neither the cause nor the effect have yet been secured for his own country.

HONESTY PAYS.

It pays to be honest. It pays in more ways than one. It not only pays in the satisfaction it brings, but, in the long run, it pays in dollars and cents. The mechanic, the merchant, the manufacturer, the lawyer—in fact, every man that seeks advancement through his labors will find that honesty is not only the best policy, but the best stock in trade that he can have. It may take longer to earn a fortune by honest labor, but once earned, it will last longer and buy more solid comfort than double the amount earned by dishonest means. There is something better than wealth. Integrity is priceless. Money cannot buy it. The rich man may envy the poor man its possession, yet the rich can have it if they seek it from the beginning. Start right young man. Let no ambitions whisper lead you astray. Be determined to deal on the square with your fellow man. Every dollar thus earned will bring a blessing to your heart. If you can't make money honestly you had better remain poor all your life. It will not pay to exchange your honesty for a few dollars and cents. Money made by cheating your neighbors will burn into your conscience and destroy forever your earthly happiness. Does ambition lead the citizens to high political power? Let him understand that the only sure foothold in climbing the rugged steep of fame is honesty of purpose. He may have brilliant ability, may charm the eye and please the ear, but if he lack integrity he lacks the one great element of lasting power. If he is false to himself he will be false to others, and his fall will be as certain as his elevation was rapid. The wrecks of ambitious statesmen are to be seen on every side. They had ability; they had the confidence of the people; they were elevated to power and influence, but they lacked honesty and they fell—moral wrecks made so by their own folly. Let their fate be a warning to public men. Let personal integrity be the priceless jewel that money can neither buy nor sell. The fame that is built upon honesty will stand like the shaft of granite, the emblem of beauty and eternal strength.

To the new Postal law which excludes absolutely from the mails all free matter after the 30th of June, 1873 we enter our protest as it very seriously affects the country newspaper press. It not only cuts off all free mail delivery of newspapers in the county where published but all newspaper exchanges also. Did Members of Congress vote for this through a misapprehension, or did they yield to the clamor raised by the large city papers? In either case the country press will will hold them to a strict account.

WM. C. FOSTER, the "car hook" murderer expiated his crime on the gallows on Fridaay last. On the 26th, of April, 1871, he killed AVERY D PUTNAM, by striking him with a street car hook. FOSTER insulted a lady in charge of PUTNAM. The latter remonstrated for which he was killed. Every effort was made to save the guilty man's life, but Gov. DIX said "let the law take its course."

An orator told his hearers that the eyes of the vox populi were on them.—Exchange.

He must have been first cousin to the man on the stump who exclaimed, "Fellow Citizens, we are surrounded by an incubus."

CORRESPONDENCE

A Word of Praise.

To the Editor of the North Carolinian:

While I fully endorsed the action of our citizens and willingly gave my mite to assist in showing the high appreciation we felt toward Dr. Underwood, I as one of the natives feel that there are others, and especialy one, to whom our town should, and I doubt not but that they do feel under many obligations for his valuable services in building up, and infusing life and energy, into our people, I refer to Mr. W. H. Smith, for I think that I speak the sentiment of nearly all the community, at least the live and active portion of it, when I say no man that has come amongst us has shown more energy and enterprise than he. There are many minor enterprises which he has either inaugurated or entered into since he came to our little city, but there is one that stands up as a grand and imposing monument. I refer to the building known as the "Albemarle House". Where Mr. Editor, could you have found another man who would have attempted to have completed the work that was begun under such favorable circumstances, and in the midst of his undertaking, to have his anticipations blasted by his partner Mr. Cone's death? And our people not knowing the man upon whom the completion of the noble structure that was only fairly begun was to devolve, thought at once when the news of Mr. Cone's death shocked our community, we will never see what we all so ardently desired; a Hotel that would be an ornament not only to our city, but to the State. But to the surprise of many and not to a few who knew upon whom the task of completing the building had fallen, they soon heard the sound of the trowel and the saw, and where for a few days all was quiet, now again was activity. And so it continued. And now within its walls the stranger and the traveler can find accomodations not surpassed by and Hotel in this or any other Southern State. To whom are we more indebted than to Mr. Smith for the many Northern faces we meet on our street? Many of whom are gentlemen of means, and have already invested, and others are continually doing so. But for the fact that they could find a comfortable place to stop, but few of the great number that have come, would have visited as you have truthfully said, the most fertile soil, and the most delightful climate in America. We close by hoping Mr. Smith may long live to reap the fruit of his labor, and that many of his kind may come amongst us.

ENTERPRISE.

Elizabeth City, N. C., Mar. 22, 1873.

From Over the Sound.

To the Editor of the North Carolinian:

Our quiet village was greatly disturbed on the morning of the 25th, of February; the str. "Louisa" arriving and the report preceeding her that her captain had died in Edenton of small pox. The rumor and alarm soon spread over our town, and the indefatagable mayor dispatched the port surgeon to make the necessary examination and report to his honor. No disease appearing, crew all well, she was allowed to deliver her freight here, and proceed up the Roanoke to various points and do likewise. While up the river a gentleman in Jamesville, who was on board in company with the captain previous to his indisposition, took sick and proved to be a case of small pox. The honorable mayor would not allow the boat to land on her return trip.

It would be well for the inhabitants on the Roanoke, where the infected steamer delivered and received freight to protect themselves against the contagious virus by early vaccination. The town authorities had no proof that the vessel had been properly purified after the desease was on board of her, and this was the great mistake made by them, to allow her to proceed up the river without knowing this fact; but we are controlled by the elite and intelligent aristocracy, and of course we pelebians are bottom rails, must lay close and say nothing. On Friday, 14th, inst. she returned to this place from above with a sick man on board and remained until late Monday receiving her load, it was currently reported he had small pox. The clerk or captain left her up the river and did not go on board, but left in the str. "Ella," while his boat left for Baltimore. She employed hands here to assist in loading her.

During our last court several colored persons were fined and imprisoned for minor offenses, and ordered to work on the road to pay cost &c. The weather being very cold on Monday night the 3d inst. No hard tack, alias opodul fire and blankets scarce, to make the apartments comfortable, they concluded to look out for more agreeable quarters, and up to the present we have no tidings of the prisoners whereabouts. It is much to be regretted that they made their escape from jail as our roads are in desperate order and need elbow greese and a plenty of it from some quarter.

The Small Pox Cases at Edenton. A True Statement.

Edenton, March 10th, 1873.

To the Editor of the North Carolinian;

Having understood that exaggerated reports about Small Pox in this community have been circulated, and that persons are afraid to come here, I take this occasion to give you a true statement of the whole matter.

More than three weeks since Capt. Wm. Thompson, Stmr. Louisa, plying between here and Baltimore, came home with the disease already contracted and in a few days died. It was not pronounced Small Pox until his wife was attacked; after a short illness she died. The only child, a small boy, had Varioloid, and is now well.

Precautions were duly taken by proper authorities, and there has been no other case in the town or country.

The Louisa returned here a few days since with another case on board, but was not permitted to land and has gone to Norfolk.

You will readily see that there is no danger in coming here; and in justice to the community please give the reports public denial.

Yours, &c.,

M.

In rejoicing over the return of those of our people who have emigrated from the State, and in claiming the credit of settling up the Gulf States and the Southwest, the Hillsboro Recorder pursues the question of the State's present worth and her future prospects. That paper says:

We should look more closely into our own resources to learn what a State we have. There is none like it in climate, in soil, in variety of production, in diversity of mineral wealth, in unrivalled water power, and with an extended system of internal improvements, in commercial position. The census of 1840, the first accurate statistical information furnished to the people of the country, showed that North Carolina, furnished to a greater or less extent, something of the products of every one of the other States of the Union, and was the only one that could make such exhibit. Nor were these productions mere samples or speciments, but with the exceptions of the sugars of Louisiana, staples, all raised on a large scale. There was the sugar of Louisiana, and the maple sugar of Vermont, the rice of South Carolina and the barley of New York, the indigo of Georgia, and the buckwheat of Pennsylvania; there was wheat and oats, and rye, and corn, all produced in large quantity, while all the great southern staples cotton, and tobacco, and rice were raised extensively.

Since 1840, there have been some changes owing to the liberation of the negro. Rice is no longer an important item. But cotton has increased from 40,000 to 200,000 bales, Tobacco from 11,000,000 to 43,000,000 lbs. Other items are coming into consequence. The culture of the vine promises to make North Carolina a rival of California, while in other fruits, she will always be without a superior.

The tide of immigration will be turned this way at no distant day, and then will the superior advantages of our State be seen, and appreciated, in the meantime our own people will learn to stay at home, and appreciate what is so attractive to the foreigner

A NEW ERA IN JOURNALISM.

THE GREAT ACHIEVEMENT OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.

THE DAILY GRAPHIC

All the News and Full of Pictures.

THE DAILY GRAPHIC is the title of a newspaper, published in New York, which is achieving the most remarkable journalistic success ever chronicled. It is an eight-page evening paper (three editions daily), elegantly printed, and conducted by the ablest editorial talent attainable.

As a newspaper THE DAILY GRAPHIC stands in the first rank, and contains regularly

THE VERY LATEST AND FULLEST NEWS FROM ALL PARTS OF THE WORLD.

Its great feature consists in the fact that it is not only a newspaper, but an illustrated newspaper as well. Four of its pages are filled with choice reading matter—telegrams, editorials, general and local news, items, gossip, and correspondence on the freshest and most interesting topics. The remaining four pages consist of executed in the most faultless and artistics style, and portraying accurately and fully all leading events within twenty-four hours after their occurrence. Those who have made journalism a study, and fully appreciate the great enterprise manifested in the collection and publication of news by the aid of the telegraph, steam presses, and the development of journalistic talent, have been fond of advancing the theory that the next advance in that field would result in a newspaper furnishing in its regular issues pictures of all current prominent events. That theory is a theory no longer; the newspaper of the future is the newspaper of to-day, and that paper is THE DAILY GRAPHIC. The processes which render this marvellous acheivement an existing fact are the result of the most carefull study and an endless variety of experiments, gradually perfected during the past twelve years. They depend upon improvements in lithographic and the application of the photographic camera. By their aid a picture is engraved and made ready to print in from twenty minutes to two hours. Costly and elaborate plates, works of art, scenes of interest, are reproduced and pictured forth with equal facility and the most scrupulous fidelity. Illustrations of leading events are engraved and prepared for the press even before the accompanying written narrative or description leaves the hands of the compositor.

For the proper practical working of so great an enterprise, THE GRAPHIC COMPANY was formed, with

CAPITAL OF $500,000 IN GOLD, months and months before the first issue of THE DAILY GRAPHIC, the most extensive preparations were made, and to-day THE GRAPHIC COMPANY has

The Largest and most Complete Newspaper Establishment in the United States.

In the great work of illustrating the events of the day an extensive corps of the best known and most accomplished artists are constantly engaged.

THE DAILY GRAPHIC aims to be in its strictest sense a newspaper. Striving always to be just and truthful, it discusses all questions independently and impartially. It is not the organ of any party, sect, or creed. It is always high-toned, and contains nothing to offend any taste. Its contents give it an immense advantage over the "old fashioned" papers. The annual subscriber gets a volume of twenty-for hundred pages, constituting a valuable record of events and a graphic panorama of our time and progress. It possesses not merely a local interest, but is a paper for every reader of the language. It is, emphatically,

BANKRUPTCY.

THE FIFTY PER CENT. CLAUSE.

As there seems to be a misunderstanding in regard to the effect of the provision of the Bankrupt Act, commonly called the 50 per cent. clause, we publish the following extracts from the Act:

The second clause of the tairty-third section as amended by the Act of July 27, 1868, provides "that no discharge shall be granted to a debtor whose assets shall not be equal to fifty per centum of the claims proved against his estate upon which he shall be liable as the principal debtor, unless the assent of writing of a majority in number and value of his creditors to whom he shall have become liable as principal debtor, and who shall have proved their claims, filed in the case at or before the time of hearing of the application for discharge.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled—that the provision of the second clause of the thirty-third section of said act as amended by the first section of an act in amendment thereof, approved July 27th, 1868, shall not apply to those debts from which the bankrupt seeks a discharge which were contracted prior to January 1st, 1869.

The true meaning is not that a bankrupt must be able to pay fifty per cent of all his debts, before he can obtain a discharge, as many believe; but that his estate, in the hands of his assignee, at the time of the discharge, must be equal, to fifty per cent. of the amount of the debts.

1. That he owes as principal;
2. That have been proved against his estate in bankruptcy; and
3. That he has contracted since the 31st day of December, 1868.

Or, if a majority in number and value of those who have proved their debts, to whom the bankrupt is indebted as principal, on debts contracted subsequent to Dec., 31, 1868, consent in writing to the discharge—such bankrupt may be discharged forever from all his debts.

If a debtor, owing three thousand dollars as principal, twenty-five hundred of which indebtedness was contracted prior to January 1. 1869, and five hundred subsequent to that time, files his petition in bankruptcy, and all his creditors prove against him, and there are no assets in the hands of the assignee, the petitioner will be entitled to a discharge; but it will be a bar only to the debts contracted prior to January 1, 1869.—If no creditors prove, the discharge will be good against all debts, whether contracted before or after January 1, 1869.

The practical effect in bankruptcy-cases generally is, that creditors fail to prove their debts, finding it ordinarily unprofitable. They have had, in a large majority of instances, heretofore the trouble and expense of making proofs, without receiving any return. The 50 per cent. bugbear, therefore when viewed in the light of the law and common-sense, disappears.

EXEMPTIONS IN BANKRUPTCY.

The exemptions under the 14th section of the Bankrupt Act are as follows.

1. Household and Kitchen furniture to an amount not exceeding $500,00
2. Wearing apparel of Bankrupt and family.
3. Uniform, &c., if he has been a soldier in the United States Army.
4. Personal property of the value of $500.00 to be selected by the Bankrupt.
5. A Homestead and the dwelling and building used therewith, not exceeding in value the sum of $1000,00; or in lieu thereof, any lot in any city, town or village not exceeding in value the sum of $1000.000.
6. The reversionary interest in the Homestead lands.

In laying off the Exemptions in some Districts, the Assignees are ordered to accept, and abide by, any assignment of a homestead which has been made by a Sheriff under the State laws; or which has been assigned upon the application of a debtor in accordance with the laws of North Carolina. Where no such assignment of homestead has been made, the assignee will proceed to set apart such homestead, and make the other exemptions according to the rules of the bankrupt Court.

The report of such exemptions when made by the assignee can be excepted to by the bankrupt or by any creditor, within twenty days after the allotment of such exempt property.

EFFECT OF THE DISCHARGE IN BANKRUPTCY UPON JUDGMENT.

It is the opinion of many of our best lawyers that the discharge in bankruptcy, discharges judgment debts existing against the bankrupt at the time of filing his petition, and that therefore the liens existing by virtue of such judgments, upon homesteads are wiped out, and cannot afterwards be enforced. In fine, that the practical effect of the discharge, is to leave a man, whose homestead was encumbered by judgments, free from all his debts, of every nature, and the owner in fee simple of such homestead.

Again many lawyers, equally prominent in the profession, are of opinion that such will not be the effect of the discharge. That the homestead, will still be liable under the judgments and that when it determines under our State laws, the judgment creditor may enforce his lien aud collect his debts.

To place this matter beyound doubt, the following rule has been adopted for the benefit of petitioners who are not willing to run any risk.

That the petitioning debtor may file his petition

THIS WEEK'S ADVERTISEMENTS.

We call attention to the following new advertisement in this issue.
Bankrupt Notices.
The Cheap Store.
Wilkins& Moore, Commission Merchants.
Pain-Killer.
Wilson's Liver Remedy.
Notice.
New Machine shop.

Local and Personal.

☞ The peach trees are now out in beautiful bloom. The fruit prospect is a good one.

☞ Quite a quantity of Shad are now being shipped from this place to the Northern markets.

☞ The attention of those interested is called to the notice of the Executive Com., Albemarle Agricultural Society.

☞ The Fisheries are in full operation The indications are that there will be more fish shipped from this region than ever before.

☞ There is no entertainment so cheap as reading, nor any pleasure so lasting. Every family should be furnished with a newspaper.

☞ Our Saw Mills are busy manufacturing lumber and our Grist Mills are running up to their full capacity grinding meal. There is still room for other and larger Mills. And they will be built.

☞ The schooner "Dick Williams" left Philadelphia over six weeks ago loaded with freight for this city. She has not yet arrived. We learn that she is lying on the swash at Hatteras.

☞ FRANK COOK's new building on Road Street is going to be an ornament to the city. The front is of heavy plate glass 108 x 52 inches and the ornamental finish is very pretty.

☞ In reply to numerous parties making inquiry about JEROME R. HUDSON & Co., of New York we have to say that we have reasons we believe them to be swindlers.

☞ An Edenton correspondent gives a statement in this issue of the NORTH CAROLINIAN of the small pox cases in that town. The matter has been very much exaggerated.

☞ A number of our country exchanges are severely condemning the conduct of the hens that are standing around barn yard doors doing nothing, while eggs are selling at the present high prices.

☞ One of the chief means to secure immigration to new places is the sending of the village paper to acquaintances and friends in the North. If a few more of our leading citizens were to subscribe for a number of copies of the CAROLINIAN to be sent to different parties in the North they would aid in securing a flow of most valuable immigrants.

☞ A party of ladies and gentlemen, natives and citizens, chartered the steamer "Harbenger" on Friday last and made an excursion to the Croeatan Fisheries. Unfortunately the Sound was not as placid and amiable as usual and the "angry surging of the billows" caused a number on board to undergo the tormenting sensations of sea sickness.

☞ The voice of the NORTH CAROLINIAN is still for improvement, for development, for progress. Though a hackneyed theme, like the gospel, it is "ever new." It is only by agitation, by continual preaching that the proper impression can be made and the desired results accomplished. We propose keeping on, fighting it out on this line if it takes all summer.

☞ The Knights of Jerico, a Temperance organization, was reorganized at this place on the evening of the 24th, inst. The following officers were elected:

Chief, T. A. Commander; Vice Chief, R. A. Sawyer; Recorder, S. E. Overby; Treasurer, T. R. Cobb; Chaplain, O. C. Horton; Marshal, W. Krause; Herald, W. H. Purcell; Guard, G. Kesler; Sentinel, R. Davis, P. W. Chief, J. H. Burgess.

☞ The communication of "Enterprize" is well timed and we endorse it. We believe there is a spirit among our citizens to award due praise to all who accomplish good for our town and people. Be he pioneer or one of those who came after, or be he among the number yet to come, the man who does the most to place Elizabeth City on the flood tide of material advancement and industrial development is entitled to, and will receive the highest meed of praise.

☞ Persons who would advance their business interests, or those of their friends by gaining the attention of the CAROLINIAN's readers are respectfully reminded that special provision is made for the reception of their favors in our advertising department. In that department they are welcomed, but they are not wanted when they come in the questionable shape of "communications." The facts contained in this brief notice is respectfully commended to the attention of whomsoever it may concern.

☞ Some people imagine their editor to know everything and hence, when in a quandary, apply to him for counsel. An annoyed subscriber writes that his neighbor's poultry troubles him almost beyond endurance and that mild expostulations have proved in vain. He desires us to tell him whether he is justified in using "powder and lead ?" Suppose, before he resorts to such extreme measures, he tries the plan suggested by the old Rural Poet:

"If your neighbor's hens are troublesome
And steal across the way
Don't let your angry passions rise
But fix a place for them to lay."

☞ The Track on the Fair Ground at this place is now finished. It was made by Maj. F. D. BUNNELL, who has built several of the best tracks in New York and Pennsylvania. It is a half mile track in length, the curves are accurate, the grading well done and the width sufficient for four abreast. It will be the finest track in the State. The first "trot" will come off some time in May.

☞ The Board of Education has addressed a circular letter to the School Committee of each Township in the County requesting an estimate of the cost of running the Public Schools four months the report to be made on the first Monday in April. It is to be hoped that a prompt response will be made. Our School interests are suffering for want of proper attention.

☞ While this section of our State is an agricultural one, it at the same time posesses very fine facilities for manufacturing establishments. We have written line upon line, and a series of editorials impressing upon our people the great importance of directing attention—we mean in a practical way—to this subject. The time has come when, if we would not be left high and dry upon the beach by the waves of Progress, we must go to building manufactories, must use the grand facilities at our command. Now is the time to act. We have the location; we have the native advantages which most other points do not possess. Let us use them! If we obsternately refuse to do so we cannot expect prosperity. Clinging tenaciously to old time landmarks, and looking back upon the foot prints of our grand sires will not do.

"Pain-Killer."

There can be no necessity at this late day, for the press to speak in commendatory terms of this remarkable medicine, in order to promote its sale; for it is a medicine that is known and appreciated the wide world through. Whenever we speak of the Pain-Killer, as in the present instance, we do so in behalf of the afflicted, rather than with the view of advancing the interests of its proprietors. For various diseases, such as rheumatism, cholera, cholera-morbs, burns, sprains, bruises, and so on to the end of the catalogue, we are convinced that there is no remedy before the people equal to Davis' Vegetable "Pain-Killer," and we know that thousands upon thousands entertain the same belief. Certainly, we cannot refer to the history of any medicine which equals that of the Pain Killer. It was introduced in 1840, and from that time to this its sale, both at home and abroad, has constantly and rapidly increased, and we rejoice at the high reputation it has achieved, because this reputation shows that it has been the means of relieving a vast amount of human suffering. We hope the present proprietors of Davis' Vegetable "Pain-Killer," will long live to enjoy the prosperity they have so fairly won.

The life of a pauper in Rutland County, Vt., is not altogether devoid of meagre streaks of sunshine. The report of the overseers of the poor in one of its towns lately contained a charge of $3 for "taking paupers to menagerie." Somebody is mean enough to object to the expense.

We are informed says the Charlotte Observer, that there is an old gentleman in that county who has kept one fire burning in his house for the past twenty-five years. The fire was kindled on the night of his marriage, and has been kept burning, winter and summer, ever since. He says it shall never be permitted to die until he does.

Dr. Dio Lewis gives the following cure for dyspepsia: "Have a right good talk, with a funny anecdote or two, and half a dozen laughs with each meal. This eating alone at a restaurant and shoveling in the provender in solemn silence, will give dyspepsia to an ostrich."

The Hon. G. S. Boutwell was chosen a member of the Massachusests House of Representatives at the age of 24, and became Governor of that State in 1350, at the age of 35. He is a native of Brooklin, Mass., and was born in 1818.

One of Gen. Butler's constituents having written to him complaining of heavy taxes, and condemning the salary steal, the General has made a computation from which he discovers that the $5,000 which he receives cost on an average each taxpayer of the country three cents. He therefore inclosed to his correspondent that sum, and announced his willingness to return to any one else who does not feel able to pay the increased taxes on account of the salary grab, the same amount.

Col. Walter Clark, of Halifax, and Eugene Morehead, Esq., of Greensboro, will sail for Europe about the 1st of May to attend the great exposition at Vienna.

A DISEASE WITH A THOUSAND SYMPTOMS.—Dyspepsia is the most perplexing of all human ailments Its symptoms are almost infinite in their variety, and the forlorn and despondent victims of the disease often fancy themselves the prey, in turn, of every known malady. This is due, in part, to the close sympathy which exists between the stomach and the brain, and in part also to the fact that any disturbance of the digestive function necessarily disorders the liver, the bowels and the nervous system, and affects, to some extent the quality of the blood. A medicine that, like Hostetter's Bitters, not only tones the stomach, but at the same time controls the liver, produces a regular habit of body, braces the nervous, purifies the fluids and "ministers to a mind diseased," is therefore the true and only specific for chronic indigestion. Such is the operation of this famous vegetable restorative. It not only cures dyspepsia but also all concomitants and consequences. Moreover, it is invaluable as a preventive of indigestion. No one who chooses to take half a wineglassful of this agreeable appetizer and stomachic habitually three times a day will ever be troubled with oppression after eating nausea, sour eructations, or any other indications of a want of vigor in the digestive and assimilating organs. The debility and languor superinduced by hot weather are immediately and permanently relieved by the Bitters, and persons who are so constitutionally inclined to look upon life "as through a glass darkly," will be apt to take a brighter and more hopeful view of the situation under the genial influence of this wholesome medicinal stimulans.

CELEBRATED
Horse and Cattle Powders.

This preparation, long and favorably known, will thoroughly re-invigorate broken down and low-spirited horses, by strengthening and cleansing the stomach and intestines.

It is a sure preventive of all diseases incident to this animal, such as LUNG FEVER, GLANDERS, YELLOW WATER, HEAVES, COUGHS, DISTEMPER, FEVERS, FOUNDER, LOSS OF APPETITE AND VITAL ENERGY, &c. Its use improves the wind, increases the appetite—gives a smooth and glossy skin—and transforms the miserable skeleton into a fine-looking and spirited horse.

To keepers of Cows this preparation is invaluable. It is a sure preventive against Rinderpest, Hollow Horn, etc. It has been proven by actual experiment to increase the quantity of milk and cream twenty per cent. and make the butter firm and sweet. In fattening cattle, it gives them an appetite, loosens their hide, and makes them thrive much faster.

In all diseases of Swine, such as Coughs, Ulcers in the Lungs, Liver, &c., this article acts as a specific. By putting from one-half a paper to a paper in a barrel of swill the above diseases will be eradicated or entirely prevented. If given in time, a certain preventive and cure for the Hog Cholera.

Care of Fowls in Transportation.

Among the numerous instances of cruelty to the lower animals, we have had special occasion to remark the inexcusable negligence of breeders in sending fowls away on long journeys illy provided, or not at all, with food and drink. The negligence is culpable and, moreover, foolish, for thereby the greatest injury is done to the fowls themselves, and if the fact that the animals will suffer painfully has no influence upon the owner, it would seem as if the selfish wish to avoid loss would have some weight. For a prolonged abstinence in an animal, feeding so frequently as the domestic fowl, and subject to such extensive draughts on the system, is often followed by irremediable injury to the constitution. We would avoid breeding from a bird that we knew had been thus treated, just as we would avoid one that had any great defect, such as a bad form, producing weakly chicks and the like. The evils of all underfeeding are well enough understood; in the case, however the difficulty is increased by the suddenness of the shock, the fowl not having time to acusom itself to it. What is said of feeding is also true of the supply of water. A healthy fowl will drink fifteen to twenty times per day, and in a close coop, or in hot weather, still oftener. Therefore all possible pains should be taken to properly fasten water cups in the travelling cages.

If, however, a fowl comes to hand—for we will do the reader the honor of supposing that he would be guilty of such an offence—that he has been deprived of food and drink for a long time, we must remember that the powers of the system are lowered, that the ability to digest is diminished, together with the general nerveous power, and that from the lack of material the amount of gastric juice is also lessened. We must, therefore, for a time, limit the supply both of solids and liquids, and the food first given should be quite wet. "Sopped bread" is recomended, and this is probably as good as anything else. We would also endorse the recomendation to soften the bread in ale, if there appears to be unusual depression. This care ought to be extended during' at lerst, a couple of days.—The Poultry World.

System in Farming.

At a recent meeting of Farmers, Professor Miles, of the Michigan Agricultural College, said:

Farmers should cultivate habits of investigation, and go to the bottom of questions, and when recommendations are made, they should consider all the surroundings. The great defect of American farming is a want of system—the want of a proper comprehension of the relations which one department of the farm bears to other departments. If we raised stock, it should be with reference to raising of grain, and if we raise grass and grain, it should be with reference to raising stock. We cannot always afford to raise that which pays the best, because of its influence upon other departments. There are, of course, locations where the farm be given to a speciality, but as a general rule, mixed husbandry, giving a variety of products, is best. The labor question is a troublesome one, and farmers will find it to their advantage to so shape their systems that they can employ their labor all the year round, and thus avoid the evil of paying high wages a portion of the year. He did not believe the absolute exhaustion of Western soils practically impossible; but it is impossible to bring the land into such a condition, that it will not profitably produce the same crop year after year. But the farmer should grow those crops which, other things being eqtual, will give the most value in manure, and this value can be measured, becaus it depends upon a few elements which have a commical price.

Quantity of Milk for a Pound of Butter.

An important inquiry in the purchase and sale of a cow, is the amount of butter she will make per week. This is a question easier asked than answered—for which there are various reasons; one being that the owner of a cow may not have the conveniences for seperating one cow's milk from others in the dairy, or if the experiment is tried, it may be intrusted to careless or unscrupulous or ignorant helps. It is therefore difficult to arrive at a correct result in this way; and we have found a much easier plan is to measure the cow's milk at each milking, which the owner, if he does not do the milking himself, may stand buy and see it thoroughly done and actually measured. All that is necessary, then, to ascertain the quantity of butter per week, is to know the usual quantity of milk required for a pound of butter. This varies, of course, in different breeds; but as an average, we should say, it takes eight to twelve quarts per day, if the quality of milk is not below the usual standard, should therefore make two and a half pounds per day, or a little over eleven pounds per week. We have found that it takes less milk to make a pound of butter with a Jersey cow than any other breed. Six quarts of Jersey milk has sometimes made it; but we put the average with this breed at eight quarts to a pound of butter.—C. L. Sharpless.

Condiments in Poultry Diet.

Cayenne pepper, mustard, or ginger can, with great benefit, be added to the food of fowls, to increase their vigor, and to stimulate egg production.

This apparently artificial diet will be seen to be natural if we remember that wild birds of the gallinacious species get access to very many highly-spiced berries and buds; articles that give the "game flavor" to the flesh. The ordinary food of the domestic fowl is not, indeed, entirely without some such addition, since there is more or less of an aromantic drinciple in wheat, Indian corn, and all other grains. Nevertheless, it is not sufficient in quantity to supply the place of the stronger species, a taste for which is part of the fowl's inherited constitution. A moderate quantity of cayenne, etc., added to the ground grain is always productive of health and thrift in poultry. —The Poultry World.

Hen Manure and Ashes.

A subscriber in Crawford Co., Pa., writes us for information, how to mix hen manure and ashes for application to corn hills.

We reply that the potash would be very apt to liberate the amonia in hen manure, and it is not advisable to make such a mixture, unless soil is put in it as an absorbant. The quantity to each hill of course must be regulated by the amount of absorbing material used. We have no absolute rule for making such a mixture, and if any of our farmers have, we shall be glad to hear from them.—Prae Farmer.

The Henderson Trihune says that one house in Petersburg a few days ago received ten thousand pounds of dried fruit from Western Carolina.

PREPARED WHEAT

AND

SUGAR OF MILK.

Patented July 23d 1872.

A FARINACEOUS FOOD FOR INVALIDS AND INFANTS.

By the peculiar process in which this preparation is made, all the flesh forming constituents—EARTH and SALINE elements of the grain are retained, with none of the STARCH, all of which being converted into Dextrine. It contains all the Lime, Sulphur, Phosphorus, Iron and Manganese for the animal judices, and Gum and Fecula for respiration and fatty tissue, with the proteine compounds (Gluten, Albumen &c.) from which nerve and muscular tissue, are found.

It is believed by the most inteligent men that much of the suffering, sickness and mortality of mankind is traceable to deficient or faulty nutrition. The same cause may also be assigned the frequent disapointment of physicians in the result of the ation of most approved remedies. We feel sure that this article will supply the deficiency.

MISCELLANEOUS.

PROSPECTUS.
THE REPUBLIC.

Believing that the inestimable privileges of self-government guaranteed by the Federal Constitution involve corresponding duties, and that among these are sleepless vigilance and the devotion of the best thonghts and efforts of the citizen in aid of the preservation and developement of our country and institutions, we have determined, in furtherance of these objects, to establish a monthly magazine devoted to the discussion of the science of government and to a review or political events.

Assuming that the legitimate objects of good government is provision for welfare and happiness of the citizen, his physical comfort, educational growth and moral development, THE REPUBLIC will bring to this test all economic questions, political action, and governmental measures.

Holding firmly that in a republic, constituted as ours is, political parties are essential, and that they furnish the best, not to say the only means of that constant and severe scrutiny to which power should always be subjected, THE REPUBLIC will insist that the country is not only safe, but safest with its destiny in the keeping of the Republican party; that measures of reform and progress must be carried forward through its instrumentality, and that its permanent accendency should be maintained so long as it responds to the demands of enlightened and progressive public opinion.

THE REPUBLIC will avoid unwarranted censure of opponents as well as indiscriminate praise of friends—aiming at that degree of independence and candor which concede justice to both. It will not waste words. Influence, or power by purely negative criticisms, but will endeavor to promote correct action by affirmatively and plainly showing the better way. True, this line of criticism involves thought, care, investigation—with the exercise of an impartial judgment; but history has conclusively demonstrated that by these means the cause of truth and good government can be best advanced.

THE REPUBLIC will furnish a brief and accurate record of events of political and moral interest, as—

The proceedings of Congress.

The decisions and actions of the Executive Departments.

The action of States and of political bodies of national import.

The progress of material and educational development.

Decisions of the judiciary of political or financial importance and of general application.

The publication being monthly, the record will be made up after the events have transpired, and will make, at the close of the year, a volume of accurate and valuable information in convenient form for preservation and reference.

Among the topics claiming discussion will be:

The relative power and jurisdiction of the Federal and State Government; the expansion of territory, revenue, finance, education, industrial schools, postage telegraph, postal savings banks, railway and canal tarnsportation, life and fire insurance, river and harbor improvements, the public health, reforms in the public service, and the establishment of equal civil and political rights. On these and kindred subjects THE REPUBLIC will aim to convey reliable information, excite thought, and induce action.

The writers for THE REPUBLIC have been selected from among those whose sagacity,
